PROFIT-SHARING REMEDY FOR DEARTH OF LABOR

Kukiaia, Hawaii, June 6, 1906.

Editor Advertiser: That the labor question here is getting to be a very serious matter no one, I think, will deny. But to realize this thoroughly, one has to go into the fields of some of the plantations and see the cane choked up with weeds and grass, or go into some of the mills and see them standing idle for lack of men to work them.
Some of these fields, I regret to say, are in a most shocking condition, and which must inevitably prove disastrous to the cane, and to next year's crop. And as for dividends, it seems to me, in many places, they are utterly out of the question. It may be said that these places that I have seen are extreme cases, but how long will it be, I would like to ask, if the laborers could continue to leave at the rate they are now leaving before every plantation is in the same condition?

It is true that the planters are to bring a thousand laborers from the Azores and Madeira, and some from the Philippines and other places, but at the rate that men are leaving, these proposed laborers from these places will, I fear, prove but a drop in the bucket, and be totally insufficient to fill even the places of the men leaving, to say nothing of the laborers needed at the present time.

Now, I am not saying anything against the means that are now being employed to get laborers. They are undoubtedly good, as far as they go. But what is mainly needed here, is to create a condition which will induce or encourage laborers to stay here, and in fact induce others to come of their own accord. And this condition, I maintain, can be brought about without a cent of cost to anyone, but on the contrary, at a great gain to everybody. And all that is necessary to do to bring about these favorable conditions, is to do as they are now doing in many places in England, and America and in other countries. And this plan is simply to divide a part of the dividends among the laborers.

Now, this plan, at first sight, might seem objectionable, as it would, apparently, leave less money to be divided among the stockholders. But on the contrary, I maintain, there would be more, and not less money to be divided among the stockholders if this plan were adopted; and for the simple reason, that there would be more work done by the laborers. I have had some experience in this matter and I know that it will succeed. I know that if you want to get the best work out of a man you must offer him some incentive, some inducement beyond his ordinary wages.
And when a man knows that his wages depend not only upon the time he works, but upon the amount of work he does, he will evidently do more work.
But it is the principle of co-partnership and co-operation that also tells, so that when a laborer feels that the success of a plantation depends, to some extent at least, upon his individual or personal efforts he naturally does his best. As I said before, it's the thought of sharing in the dividend, the thought that by doing his utmost he will be recompensed and rewarded, is the lever, or thought, that will urge him on.

Again, a laborer is not so likely to leave his employer when he knows that by doing so he would be losing his part of the dividends. Indeed, it seems to me a question of sharing the dividends among the laborers, or getting none at all.

I will say that I have had some experience in the matter, as I said before, and found that it not only pays, but it is truly amazing what a quantity of work a man will do when he sees a prospect of gaining something extra by so doing. I make this request, or plea, on behalf of the laborers, who have to bear the greatest burden and heat of the day, though I do not think it would hurt anything to extend the plan to all the employees. Respectfully yours,

GEO. OSBORNE.

THE CHURCHES, MINISTERS AND SCHOOLS OF HONOLULU

Editor Aline of Amsterdam writes as follows of some of the civilizing institutions of Honolulu:

Honolulu is well supplied with churches. The principal one, the Central Union church, built of volcanic stone, is one of the handsomest structures in the city.

For more than forty years, under Bishop Staley and Bishop Willis, Hawaii was a mission bishopric of the Church of England. Bishop Henry B.
Restarick, who is now in charge, is the first incumbent of the American jurisdiction. Returning with him the other day from Lahaina, on the island of Maui, where he had held confirmation services, I learned that he is well acquainted with Rev. David Sprague, Rev. Philo Sprague and Bishop Griswold, all of whom are pleasantly remembered in Amsterdam. St. Andrew's Cathedral, where I heard the Bishop preach a helpful sermon a fortnight ago, is a memorial of King Kameameha IV. and a fine specimen of Gothic architecture. The stone for its arches, pillars and windows came from Bath, England.

One of the most active clergymen here is the Rev. John W. Wadman, pastor of the cozy Methodist Episcopal church. He takes the lead in temperance work and has just made an unsuccessful attempt to induce Acting Governor Atkinson to change to life imprisonment the death sentence passed upon five Korean murderers whose crime was an exceptionally brutal one, including the torture of their victim.

Public sentiment seems to sustain the course of the governor, while giving the clergyman credit for his humanitarian motives.

The English Lutherans have a $50,- 000 house of worship donated by Mr.
John F. Hackfeld, one of the most prominent business men in the islands.
There is also a Christian or Disciples church and a Roman Catholic mission established in 1877, which has 100 churches in the territory, with 30,000 members of various nationalities, and three large and successful schools.

Last, but by no means least, is the Kawaiahao church, where the natives worship. This large and plain structure is one of the landmarks of the city. The coral rock of which the walls are built were passed from hand to hand from the quarry to the site by hundreds of devoted converts standing in line. The church was organized in 1825, with ten converts which number had increased in 1837 to nearly 4,000. Kings and queens worshipped there. The original meeting house was built of sticks and grass and resembled a wigwam. The interior of the present structure is like that of modern churches. Soon after my arrival, I attended service there. The central aisle is noticeable for its great breadth. Wide open windows let in plenty of fresh air. A fine organ faced the congregation and assisted a double quartet choir in making music, which included such familiar airs as "Happy Day" and "Let Us Gather at the River." Two children were bat-tized and three adults added to the membership. The Sunday school was present and sang two selections in English. The dignified pastor, the Rev. Henry H. Parker, delivered a short address in an impressive manner, apparently referring to the duties to the church and of the church to the new members. No collection was taken.

The mother of Rev. Mr. Parker, who is over a century old, is still living near Honolulu and is quite vigorous for her age.

The graveyard near the church contains the ashes of some of the early American missionaries. Its most striking feature is the tomb of King Lunahlo "who preferred a sepulcher amidst his people to a more pompous resting place in the royal mausoleum" on Nuuanu avenue.

The American missionaries printed the first spelling book for the Hawaiians in 1822 and afterwards conducted schools here. In 1843 a department of public instruction was established. "From the Republic to the Territory" educational affairs were in charge of the veteran Alatau T. Atkinson, father of the acting governor.
The high school stands at the head of the public school system, with a grammar school annexed. There are a dozen teachers and 300 pupils in both institutions. Without going into unnecessary detail, mention should also be made of Kawaiahao seminary for Hawaiian girls; and the Kamehameha schools, founded and maintained by a bequest of lands from Princess Bernice Pauahi Bishop, a descendant of the Kamehamehas, to which bequest her surviving husband, Charles K.
Bishop of San Francisco, has made generous additions. Good work is being done in both these institutions, and so thorough is the instruction in Oahu college—under the management of President Arthur F. Griffiths, that its graduates may enter the leading universities in the states without examination. This college, "a child of the New England mission," was opened in 1811, in charge of the Rev. Daniel Dole, father of Judge, formerly governor of the islands. It is situated at beautiful Punahou, two miles from the post office, and its handsome buildings with their contents represent an outlay of several hundred thousand dollars.

AN OLD CONTEST.

The Supreme Court handed down an opinion on Saturday sustaining the Circuit Court in judgment for plaintiff in the suit of J. O. Carter vs. Koolan Kai-hainahale et al. It was a judgment for possession of Kawaiahao property, bought by plaintiff at foreclosure sale, with $3250 damages for unlawful detention. There had been many previous decisions on different phases of the same contest. Kinney, McLanahan & Derby appeared for plaintiff and C. W.
Ashford for defendants.

Every Friday evening, at 7:30, informal meetings of the "Theosophical Society in America," are held in the Progress Block, second floor, rooms 7-8. Free discussions allowed on all theosophical topics and all enquirers welcome.
